I hear that those in authority of a certain bank which now employs women clerks have come to the conclusion that their "young ladies" looked too attractive, (says Corlaunde in the London Evening Standard). At all events the editor has gone forth that they must in future appear in overalls of a special pattern—buttoned up to the chin, and reaching to within two inches of the ground, so no more ankies or snowy necks will be visible. The consternation of the lady clerks can well be imagined, as although they are ready to replace men they do not want to be forced to forswear all their little vanities and their becoming working clothes. (Local Bank Managers please note.)

Blairmore Chautauqua, August 10-16

The Ellison-White Chautauqua, which is touring the country, has been enthusiastically received in every town and city where it has visited, and in many instances it has been booked for next year, so pleased are the people with the week's offering of music, lectures and concerts. At Red Deer, Olds, Calgary, Provost, Weyburn, Regina, Saskatoon and other places the big tent was packed to capacity at every session of the Chautauqua. Here are a few of the opinions taken from our exchanges:

The Red Deer News says: "The general satisfaction and delight with the whole course of instruction and entertainment, and the financial results, which just about cleared expenses, are a high tribute to the Ellison-White programme and management and to the energy and enthusiasm and civic spirit which prompted 30 of Red Deer's leading citizens to be the requisite guarantors of the cost of the Chautauqua feast of good things—together the finest course of inspiration of spirit, broadening of mind, wholesome and amplifying pleasure that the people of Red Deer and district have enjoyed."

Olds telegraphs the following: "Just closed successful Chautauqua. Everyone pleased. Now making institution a yearly affair. Programmes entertaining, educational, uplifting. A great community investment."

The Provost Journal says: "In Provost the greatest expectations were exceeded."

The Regina Daily Post says: "The week has been one continuous series of high-class musical numbers, readings from the world's greatest literature, stories, philosophy and science. The outstanding feature about the Regina Chautauqua was that it was a complete success in every way—financially, artistically and educationally. The Chautauqua managers and artists leave with the kindest compliments about Regina, and Regians bid them God-speed in their good work, which the public spirited citizens here have assented by their endorsement for next year again."

Greatest interest has been manifested locally during the past week in the coming of the Chautauqua, to Blairmore. Several meetings have been held by the local committee in the Oddfellows hall which has public-spiritedly been granted to the committee for meeting purposes. All through the Pass, from Brockton to Michel, the public have become keenly interested and promise to swarm Blairmore for one whole week. The grounds committee, under chairman, Harold Green, has decided on locating the Chautauqua on the old race track on the west townsite, which location is just ideal, affording ample space for the Chautauqua tent and for those from outside points who wish to camp near the institution. Refreshment tents will be on the grounds, Mike Howe having been granted permission to serve soft drinks, ice cream, etc., while other parties will be prepared to cater to the requirements of the hungry. Local hotel men are busy providing accommodation for the large number of guests for that week and general enthusiasm prevails.

We beg to draw attention of our readers to the advisability of purchasing season tickets. Season tickets for adults cost $2.50 up to the opening day, Friday next, after which season tickets will be $3.00. Season tickets for children are $1.00 and for students $1.50. To attend every session without a ticket would cost $7.35. See what you save by getting one. Capt. W. A. Beebe is chairman of the ticket committee and has appointed a number of ticket agents, including ourselves.

Workman Injured on Frank Slide

Action has been entered in the Supreme Court here for $15,000 general damages and $1,415 special damages by Frederick Mason against the C.P.R. as a result of an accident which occurred on March 7th last on the Frank slide.

According to the statement of claim, Mason was working as pitman on the steam shovel which was used to load rock and thus lower the grade over the slide. On the date in question a large rock jammed in the shovel. The crane was lowered on the edge of the bank and Mason was told to loosen the stone with a crowbar.

While doing so, he claims that rocks fell from above which crushed his left leg so severely that he is incapacitated for life. H. Ostlund of this city is acting for the plaintiff.

Work and Recreation

On the Shore of the Western Egyptian Desert

A short description of the coastal belt of the western desert and of our domes, thereon may be of interest to the outside world for two reasons. First, that it is a country unique in many ways, and second, that it has very seldom been visited by modern Europeans till last year, when, the Senussi, at the instigation of German emissaries were foolish enough to make us their enemies.

The idea which most people have of a desert is, I think, a false one. A waste of sand with here and there a clump of palm trees and a mirage of cool water ever tantalizing the thirsty traveller. Nor would this be a very bad description of the desert east of Suez, this kind of the West-ern desert is, however, of a totally different character. Imagine vast spaces of hard sand ground as flat as the sea, covered for the most part with shrubby plants growing twenty or thirty yards apart. The ground is strewed with innumerable white flowered aspodels. These plants and the desert snail appeared to be the only life on the latter. It is about an inch in diameter round and white and I have seen it so thick on the sand that it looked as if there had been a heavy hail-storm. The Bedouins eat it, and I do not doubt it has saved many men from starving. The ordinary white-shelled oyster is good enough for me.

The fatness of the ground and the mentioned has the effect of shortening the range of vision, and we often found it difficult to see a helio for long distance, owing to the mirror being brought below the horizon by the convexity of the land. The bird life is extremely interesting, especially in the spring and autumn, when large numbers of migratory birds come to the coast. The commonest birds are the water wattle and the crested lark. There is a duck in the lake, and a white bird at Sollum called, I believe, the western mourning chat and the cream-colored quail. The quail is a local bird, was fairly common at Matruh. I saw a pair of lesser bustards when driving in a car from Sollum to Matruh, and there were ravens, crows and several of the hawk tribes. Large numbers of quail were seen in the autumn, and to catch them the Arabs spread small nets, such as are used for ferreting rabbits, over the bushes and then drive the birds into them. They run into the bushes to hide and are caught in the nets. They are then taken out alive and brought by the ubiquitous Greek trader, who puts them into crates and sends them to Alexandria, where they are sold. They find their way to the Ritz or the Savoy or, at least they did so before war put an end to the transport of luxuries.

Foxes are common in the desert and jackals not so rare. It is rather a puzzle to know what they live on, but I imagine that their chief food is the scorpions which are very plentiful. There is also a small hare, and we occasionally saw gazelle. Many fossils shells can be picked up in the desert, proving that this great area was once under the sea. It was interesting, too, to come across traces of earlier visitors. The Roman remains are fairly numerous, among others a villa at Matruh, a good deal of which still remains. Cleopatra is said to have lived there at one time, with perhaps her Antony in attendance. I was informed on good authority that there were two tombs at Sollum made by Israelites before the time of the Babylonian exile.

The Romans used to partly get over the great difficulty of want of water by cutting large cisterns out of the solid rock in places suitable for catching the floods caused by the winter rains.

To many of us coming direct from the naked barrenness of Sinai peninsula the number and variety of the flowers was a delightful surprise, and for this Sollum surely bears the palm. In the distance it appears a most inhospitable collection of rocks and precipices, but wander into any one of the many ravines and you will find yourself in a wild rock garden lovely beyond description. The piquant contrast between the wild character of the country and the beauty of the flowers makes Sollum a most attractive place. But Matruh has its beauties, too, of a gentler sort—nowhere else have I seen sandhills so white or sea water so blue.

But what, I can hear the reader say, has all this to do with soldiering? We do not pay and feed men in war time to pick flowers and collect butterflies, No, but a man may be a soldier and not be blind to these things.

During our stay in the western desert we had no chance, as it turned out, of actual fighting. The Senussi had apparently had a lesson the year before and kept too far away for infantry to act against them in the waterless country, and eventually Mohammed had to go to the mountain in an armored car. Yet was our time by no means wasted, we women had to learn the tricks of a new trade, the trade of the infantry soldier. Something indeed we knew before from our experience on Gallipoli, but infantry drill and infantry tactics in open fighting were new and these things cannot be learnt in a week. So there was drill and lectures and musketry and field days and plenty of work to keep us employed, and certain it is that the brigade left the Western desert a far more formidable unit than when it arrived.

Our chief recreations were football, bathing and cricket, the latter a weird form of game on a nattering wicket regarded by the camels and their drivers with supercilious contempt. The place had its drawbacks, of course—those of us who went down to the sea in ships, whether on duty or on leave, had some disagreeable voyages. Some of the craft provided on this coast were of great age, which sounds like an advertisement for somebody's whiskey; in the calmest sea they rolled and pitched and the seas were by no means always calm, and then the small—but I will say no more, they will always remain a nightmare to me.

Our other chief unpleasantness was the dustworms, I don't say they were worse than in other parts of Egypt probably they were not as bad, but they were a great nuisance, while they lasted, it being impossible to keep the face and out of food, or clothing, eyes or mouth. These, however, were very minor evils, and altogether Matruh and Sollum were exceedingly grateful and comforting to those of us who had spent a winter in Gallipoli and a summer in Suez.

Sea Power and The Submarine.

Submarine Piracy Establishes a New Status to Be Dealt With

Hitherto the high seas of the world have occupied the status of "No Man's Land." On them belligerents could meet and fight their battles, while neutral shipping was immune from hostile action, unless its neutral character of employment could be established on reasonable grounds. The high seas were not neutralized. Belligerents could utilize them as a base of operations, and they were free to visit and search by belligerents.

The submarine, in German lands, has destroyed these conventions. The future status of the high seas in international law depends on the persistence of non-persistence of the new condition after the war. The discovery of a reply to the submarine will be possible to curb and punish submarine piracy. But should it demonstrate its ability to operate against merchant vessels in the time of war, with virtual impunity the old balance of naval power will have disappeared and the world will be reduced to the relative importance of an ordinary warship will restore the balance of power and will be possible to curb and punish submarine piracy. But should it demonstrate its ability to operate against merchant vessels in the time of war, with virtual impunity the old balance of naval power will have disappeared and the world will be reduced to the relative importance of an ordinary warship will restore the balance of power and will be possible to curb and punish submarine piracy.

Holland's Poor Struggling For Bare Existence

Returning Traveler Says Cost of Living Is Much Higher There Than in U. S.

"The high cost of living in America is infinitesimal when compared to the prices charged in Holland for the mere necessities of life," said Charles Spitt, of the Lindt Chocolate Company, who arrived in New York after spending more than seven months in the Netherlands.

"The poorer classes in Holland are struggling desperately for bare existence," he said, "and in many cases it has become necessary for the government to step in and give them official assistance. Through the past winter coal has been the most difficult article to obtain. Prices ranged from $65 to $70 a ton and even then coal could only be purchased with the necessary government distribution cards. The reason for the shortage is explained by the fact that only a small percentage of the coal which leaves England for Holland ever arrives at its destination. The barges carrying it are either seized or sunk by German submarines."

"All kinds of grain have been particularly scarce. Wheat flour has become little more than a luxury, and, since most of the bread is made from barley or corn.

"Gasoline for automobiles sells at $3 a gallon at The Hague, while taxicab drivers charge $4 for a ten minutes' ride, and stipulate that the journey be no longer than 3 miles as they are not allowed sufficient gasoline for a greater distance."

Mr. Spitt said that all the traction companies had reduced the operation of their rolling stock one-half to save on coal. The restaurants and cafes all close promptly at 9 p.m., as the municipal electric current is shut off at that hour.

Overcoming Lack of Dyes

What appears to be reliable reports from England indicate that the united efforts of manufacturers and chemists are within measurable distance of overcoming the lack of dyes. What resources they possess, or how they have arrived at a partial solution of the need, will not, of course, be disclosed, but there is good ground for believing that the export trade which has been held up for the need of dyes will be lifted to some extent, always assuming that tonnage is at the disposal of the freightriggers. One agent visiting Canada maintains that the British manufacturer has hitherto been able to ship goods here at prices, that have enabled retailers to prevent dry goods of certain grades mounting to big figures, and they have done so largely by economizing.

Compensation Not Likely

As compensation for the torpedoing of a Spanish ship, the German government offers at the first opportunity to arrange that a fleet of German warships will pass a Spanish warship and, flying the Spanish flag, deliver a 21-gun salute. The Madrid Journal remarks (1) the occasion is not likely to arise soon, and (2) it is still a problematical matter whether Germany will have a fleet at the end of the war.

Nights of Agony come in the train of asthma. The victim cannot lie down and sleep is driven from his brain. What grateful relief is the immediate effect of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy. It banishes the frightful conditions, clears the passages, and enables the afflicted to again sleep as soundly as and as restfully as a child. Insist on the genuine at your nearby druggist.

Sad Dilemma

Bessie—Oh, Mabel, I am in an awful dilemma. I've quarreled with Harry, and he wants me to send him my ring back.

Mabel—That's too bad.

Bessie—But that isn't the point. I've forgotten which is his ring—Puck.

Wife—Robert, how can you stay away from home so late nights?

Hub—Oh, easily, I acquired the habit while I was courting you, my dear. Boston Transcript

Expresses Hope Of Peace During Year

People Will Be Compensated For Sacrifices They Have Made

Zurich correspondent of the Petit Parisien quotes Prince von Buelow, the former German chancellor as saying in reply to birthday greetings from the city of Brönnberg, Prussia, that he hopes this year would bring to the German people the longed for peace, a peace with compensations for their sufferings and sacrifices and an indemnity which would permit Germany immediately to resume the position she occupied before the war. This is the first time Prince von Buelow has expressed himself on the subject of Germany's war aims.

Since Italy's entrance into the war, Prince von Buelow, who at that time was German ambassador at Rome, has been living in retirement in Switzerland. It has been stated repeatedly that his presence in Switzerland was connected with the German peace efforts which he was supposed to be furthering, but according to other reports he has not in the good graces of the German government.

Big Land Deals

Ranches and Farms in Southern Alberta Change Hands

One of the biggest land deals which has taken place in the Taber district for some years has just been closed whereby Albert Green has disposed of his farm and sheep ranch. The farm has been sold to Mr. Coudelge for $25,000, and Mr. Coudelge, who since disposed of a half interest in it, Mr. Green's sheep ranch on Chin coe consists of several sections and is an ideal sheep grazing area. It has been sold to Dr. Hagerman for $84,000. This, however, does not include the sheep. The ranch is well equipped with buildings, including one of the most modern houses in the south country.

There is a great deal of land changing hands in the Taber district. The Cameron ranch, which was put on the market last fall, is being bought up, partly by new settlers and partly by people living in the Taber district. The outside edge of the ranch on the northwest has all been disposed of to a depth of four or five sections.

With the Fingers! Says Corns Lift Out Without Any Pain

Some corns, hard corns, soft corns, or any kind of a corn can shortly be directly right out with the fingers if you will apply on the corn a few drops of the freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

At little cost one can get a small bottle of freezone at any drug store, which will positively rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection. This new drug is an ether compound and dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue. Just think! You can lift off your corns and calluses now without a bit of pain or soreness. If your druggist hasn't freezone he can easily get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house.

French Discover Plot

Foe Attempts to Get Information Via Prisoners

An official note issued in France warns families of prisoners of war in Germany against letters purporting to come from prisoners which contain requests for parcels of food or for certain information of military character to be conveyed by means of underlying certain words, which together form phrases. Sometimes it is suggested answers can be written in saliva on the inside of envelopes. The public is recommended to send these letters to the military authorities. It is said these proceedings are employed by the enemy to obtain information and food parcels for their own use.

The French ministry of war has prohibited the mailing of newspapers and magazines to German countries by private persons. Newspapers mailed by publishers or news companies alone will be transmitted. In addition travelers proceeding to neutral countries will no longer be allowed to take newspapers or periodicals across the frontier.

Colored Soldiers

Navajos and Utes are resisting registration in the United States and threatening to go on the warpath rather than be subject to draft for war. On the other hand, about 1,000,000 colored men have registered willingly. The contrast is particularly striking in view of the pacifist temperament of the negro and the always warlike disposition of the Indian. The Brooklyn Eagle is of the opinion that for modern warfare the negro is a better soldier than the Indian. He wears a uniform, he is brave, brave, brave officers. He is loyal to the death. A million colored men in uniform, by themselves, would be a vast man-power asset to any nation.

STRENUOUS WORK SOON TELLS ON YOU

Business Men and Breadwinners the Victims of Nervous Exhaustion

When worry is added to overwork men soon become the victims of nervous exhaustion—neurasthenia—the doctor calls it. Some have no reserve strength in their systems to bear the strain; others overtax what strength they have. If you find that you are nervous and not sure of yourself, that you sleep badly, and wake up tired and listless, your nerves are out of order. Other signs are inability to take proper interest in your work; your appetite is fickle; your back feels weak, and you are greatly depressed in spirits. One or more of these signs mean that you should take prompt steps to stop mischief by nourishing the nerves with the food they thrive on, namely the rich, red blood made by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills have cured thousands of cases of nervous disorders, including nervous prostration, neurasthenia, and nervous exhaustion. Here is an example. Mr. P. H. Coleman, P.E.I., says: "I owe my present health, if not life itself, to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had always been an active man, and when I began to run down in health paid little attention to it as I thought it only temporary weakness. As time passed, however, I found myself growing worse, and consulted a doctor, who told me I was not only out of shape, but that my nervous system was badly shattered. I lost flesh, my appetite was poor, I slept badly, and notwithstanding the doctor's treatment grew so weak that I had to leave my business and was confined to the house. Time went on and I was steadily growing weaker, and my nervous system was greatly strained by my condition. In this condition I decided to do as the doctor recommended, and to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as the doctor's medicine was not helping me I decided to do so. By the time I had used three boxes I could tell that they were helping me. When I had taken eight boxes of the pills I felt able to attend to my business again, and people were surprised to see me until I had taken twelve boxes, by which time I was feeling as well as ever I did, and I was being congratulated by all my friends on my full restoration to health. I feel now that if I had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at the outset I would not only have saved much money spent in doctor's bills, but would have had renewed health sooner. I cannot speak too highly of this medicine, and would recommend it to every man who feels weak, nervous or run down. At little cost one can get a small bottle of freezone at any drug store, which will positively rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection. French Discover Plot

Foe Attempts to Get Information Via Prisoners

An official note issued in France warns families of prisoners of war in Germany against letters purporting to come from prisoners which contain requests for parcels of food or for certain information of military character to be conveyed by means of underlying certain words, which together form phrases. Sometimes it is suggested answers can be written in saliva on the inside of envelopes. The public is recommended to send these letters to the military authorities. It is said these proceedings are employed by the enemy to obtain information and food parcels for their own use.

The French ministry of war has prohibited the mailing of newspapers and magazines to German countries by private persons. Newspapers mailed by publishers or news companies alone will be transmitted. In addition travelers proceeding to neutral countries will no longer be allowed to take newspapers or periodicals across the frontier.

The "Cowardly British"

The German navy does not wish anything more than a new encounter with the enemy, and if the latter can be induced to show themselves again we will do the rest," says the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger. Meantime, the cowardly British remain safely out in the North sea, and the heroic warships which made such good speed from Jutland remain unchallenged masters of the Kiel canal.

No More Extreme Styles

U.S. Asks Women to Do Away With The Frills

"Cut the frills in clothes," is a war edict to the fastidious from the council of national defence. In effort to institute an economy in wool for all concerned the U. S. government would have all men and women simplify their dress.

Sacrifice, patchpockets, flaring shirts, cuffs, unnecessary plaits and other frills," is the advice to the public issued from a conference of woolen and worsted manufacturers with the commercial economy board of the defence council.

No effort will be made to discourage the sale of goods made up in existing styles. The board and the manufacturers believe such a move would be wasteful. The campaign will be confined to next year's output.

The threatening shortage of wool for next year is causing grave concern and the board expects its program is to be of material assistance in making up some of the deficits.

Warts are unsightly blemishes, and corns are painful growths. Holloway's Corn Cure will remove them.

To Treat Wooden Silos

Untreated Wood Subject to More or Less Decay

Silos built of untreated wood are subject to more or less decay. Deterioration usually occurs near the foundation of the silos where certain conditions of moisture favorable for the development of the fungus or decay exist. Decay may also attack sappy wood in any portion of the structure.

Among the various preservatives in general use, a good grade of coal tar creosote is very satisfactory for preserving timber. Almost any thorough method of treatment with this preservative ought to add to the life of the silo. Superficial methods, however, such as dipping with a brush, dipping in the preservative or spraying, are not sufficient. By far the best method is to have the silos treated with the preservative in a closed report under pressure, and when so treated they should last indefinitely and should be more satisfactory to the purchaser.

Those who are considering the purchase of treated silos should investigate carefully the methods used, and if great permanence is desired should choose only material that has received a thorough pressure treatment. Silos built of such material are subject to less decay and reduction in the swelling and shrinking of the silos, and hence they can be kept at more capacity. Another advantage of silos built of well-treated wood is that they need not be painted.

To determine the effect of a preservative treatment upon the durability of wood used in silos, and to obtain information as to the effect of treated wood upon the surrounding silage, the Federal Forest Products Laboratory began experiments in 1910 in cooperation with the University of Wisconsin. About five years after the experiments were begun the treated wood had not commenced to decay. Information in regard to the effect of the treated wood upon the surrounding silage was obtained by an independent test after the first season, wood treated with creosote having been buried in the silage during the process of filling. This contaminated the silage sufficiently to give a strong odor, but the quantity of creosote in the feed could not be determined by analysis. This silage when fed to cows was not relied on as the food of the animals were affected slightly by it.

No Danger

A few days ago a well-dressed and very charming young lady failed a four-wheeler, there being no taxi in sight. Just as she was getting in she noticed that the horse seemed inclined to be frisky.

He was jumping about and switching his tail in a way that alarmed her. She was a timid little thing. So she addressed a few words to the ancient Jehu:

"I hope," she said, smiling bravely, "that you will not run away with me." The cabby sighed mournfully.

"No, mum," he replied. "I have a wife and seven kids at home already!"

Kathleen had been put out to service, and her mistress liked the rosy face of the young girl. One day Kathleen was sent on an errand to town. She was longer than usual and her mistress stood the porch as she came through the field. Kathleen was happy and her mistress observed:

"Why, Kathleen, what a rosy face you have today! You look as if the dew had kissed you."

"Indeed, ma'am, but that wasn't his name!"

"Know how to wash cars?" asked the garage man.

"Sure, I know," said the steady-looking applicant for work. "You clean everything but the license plates."

SHIPMENTS TO ENEMY POSSIBLE UNDER OUR FREE TRADE PACT

COULD BE IMPORTED BY THE CENTRAL POWERS
Manager of Lake Shippers Association States That Western Canada's Wheat Can Reach Germany Via Neutral Countries By Present System of Handling

Wheat from Western Canada can be forwarded to Germany through neutral countries under the present system of handling grain in Canada and United States, according to F. Young, general manager of the Lake Shippers' association.

Mr. Young made the statement when testifying before the board of grain supervisors in reply to a question asked by Dr. Robert Magill, chairman of the board, as to whether wheat from Western Canada could be imported by the central powers in spite of the existing embargo. He suggested a way to block such efforts, that the Netherlands government, under a three-cornered agreement with the United States and Britain, could be made trustee for the wheat imported into Holland. Another system proposed was that the shipping license should be enlarged to provide for this arrangement and that the closest cooperation with the United States authorities should be established where wheat exportations are concerned.

Shipments to Germany were possible since the free wheat plan came into force, witness said, and pointed out that it is impossible to know the ownership of grain in elevators. "It is serious to think that some of our grain can get to enemy countries," said Mr. Magill.

The co-operative companies, which own 600 elevators and raise 100,000 farmers and last year produced 92,000,000 bushels of wheat, wanted the unanimity of the board of supervisors for Canada and the United States board. The Canadian council of agriculture and the United States board to use the existing machinery to handle grain crop. They favored a flat basis price rather than maximum and minimum prices established. They wanted also to regard to the encouragement of wheat production shown and the board to assume control of flour prices as they depend on wheat values and the price of wheat on this side of the line and another price on the other side would not answer the requirements, they explained.

It was predicted that the board would have a difficult time taking over the country and operating them during the war.

Which Way Are You Pulling

You are a Vital Force Pulling One Way or the Other

There are in the world two sets of forces—one set pulling down, the other pulling up—one pulling forward, the other pulling backward. The homes, the churches, the schools, the ethical societies, art museums, higher education, and all elements, are pulling men and women up, putting more light and joy in human lives, and increasing the sum total of the world's good and happiness.

Arrayed against these benign agencies are the forces of greed, appetite and passion, which through all time have pulled downward and backward.

It is a ceaseless, unending battle, of vital and far-reaching results; and it is the first business of every one to ask himself the question:

"Which side am I on? Am I with the forces which diminish the sum total of human joy and dwarf the world's manhood, or am I on the side of those forces which increase the world with gladness and kindness and promote the character that is the basis of all true civilization and advancement?"

No matter how unimportant you may seem to be in this great battle, you are a vital force pulling one way or the other.

Which way are you pulling?

Outbreak Among Russian Sailors

Only Vague Reports Are Received; Nature of Trouble Unknown

There have been disorders among the sailors of the Black Sea at Sebastopol.

So far there have been only confused reports as to the scope of the trouble with the sailors. The reports say the disorders are in connection with the retirement of the command of the fleet, Admiral Kuznetsov, who has been taken to the hospital.

The Bolsheviks declares that under the influence of extremist agitators the sailors began to arrest some of their officers and to take the law into their own hands.

Minister of War and Marine Kersky has issued instructions that firm measures be taken to restore order. Premier Lvov, while admitting an outbreak had occurred, decried the rumors exaggerated importance.

The Sincere

A government official at a luncheon in Washington said recently:

"We are continually turning down requests for consuls. Our consular service, you know, has been taken altogether out of politics."

"You cannot talk now as Consul Smith talked in 1914," said a traveler said to Smith.

"Yes," Smith answered, lighting a cigar.

"If it had worked," asked the traveler.

"Not after you get it," Smith replied. —Washington Star.

Allowed Many Liberties

German Bullies Ordered to Be More Civil

Although the rations of our imprisoned soldiers in Germany is less in weight than it was, and not so nutritious in quality, it is asserted that the Berks war office have come to the conclusion that, as a matter of policy, it is wisest to treat prisoners with a show of decency.

At any rate, a Canadian officer in his "prison experiences" tells how at Burg, at one time one of the most infamous camps in the world, he was allowed many liberties and before he got his release even some luxuries.

In June, he writes, "they started to take us for walks twice a week along the canal banks or through the forest. This was a grand opportunity for collecting insects and butterflies, and several interesting collections were made in the camps."

The relief to be outside the barbed wire for two or three hours was immensely appreciated. Some of the prisoners had not been outside the camp palings for nearly two years.

On one of these walks, while talking to the guards, a German doctor in charge of us, I learned that he had been wounded at Ypres while observing the Canadian and Algerian. In a burst of confidence he told me that but for this exposure, he would have been a great disappointment to their general staff, and that the work which he had done caused the death of their own men.

"I noticed often that while talking to the guards at different camps, the German doctor was a Canadian they would become very reserved, and would point me out to their 'Kameraden' while I was walking round the camp. I found out afterwards that Ypres had made a great impression on them, and that they had been told that we never took prisoners and always killed the wounded."

"Towards the end of July I left for Constant to be exchanged, and, being solemnly told that I was a Canadian, I was allowed to take my time, with a light heart gave away my time, books and games, and started off in a motor car with a few clothes for the frontier."

"Before leaving Burg I was told to look for a fellow Canadian. He had been considering giving a character in another camp, and was sure to be exchanged. As I was walking pulled into Constant at about 9 p.m. I noticed another trainload of wounded, two plumes away."

"At one of the windows and shouted across to us, 'Hey, any Canadians over there?' I ventured to reply, 'Put your head in, Cooper, the police are after you.' It was a lucky shot. I never saw him again. He was a quiet, friendly fellow. And when we met him a long time before I would tell him how I had recognized him by the voice."

"At Constant, the orders are, apparently, that all prisoners about to be exchanged are to be treated with the utmost civility, and it is curious, after being man-handled through every station in Germany, spat on by the women, and kicked by the men, to be allowed to travel in second class, and sometimes even first class carriages."

Sporting Spirit Of British Soldier

Courting Death for the Sake of a Shilling

Next to the magnificent heroism—the heroism that will dare and do anything for a noble cause—the most wonderful and amazing feature of the war has been the extraordinary spirit and gallantry of the British soldier.

Here is a striking example of humor, or bravery, and Tommy's love for a gamble all rolled into one, told by an officer in an infantry regiment.

"What on earth have you got there?" he asked, noticing a section of his regiment had been ordered to fire, but still peering down into a trench.

"A dead German, sir," was the startling reply.

"What in the world are you doing with a dead German?" queried the officer.

Then he learned the story. It appeared that during a German attack a few of his men had spied a particularly tall German who, being an expert marksman, had been ordered to drop him into the British trench.

And what was the amount of the bet? "A bob, sir," was the reply.

Fancy courting death for the sake of a shilling! But that is Tommy all over.

Given Much Freedom

British Tars Enjoy Life in the Netherlands

Though the British naval men interned at Groeningen, Holland, national at spending a life of well-fed inactivity, they have come to get much variety into their peaceful existence as possible. Everything possible is done to make them feel happy and to make them feel that they are not really prisoners.

The Dutch government gives them much freedom. In fact they often get permission to leave the camp and mix with the inhabitants. Green there and many of them have become frequent guests in Dutch family circles.

Superficially, one sees these jolly sailors with the Dutch girls promenading arm in arm in the parks and other pleasure resorts. When the camp they have many outdoor amusements—tennis, cricket and football. Gardening has been encouraged, and where there once was waste land the most beautiful flower gardens have sprung up.

Engaged by their own officers and by the officers of the Groeningen garrison, they have established a number of societies for sports and the naval band frequently gives concerts, to which young and old of the inhabitants of the town are invited.

There will be no end of heartaches when the draw is made, and no doubt many a Dutch girl will follow her sailor sweetheart to the naval station to become his bride.

Are Abolishing Butterly Nurses

Unpaid Volunteer Nurses Will Be Replaced by the Professional Nurse

The lady nurse must go! That is the decree which has gone forth in France and it has caused no small commotion.

Volunteer nurses in hospitals where military sick and wounded are being treated are being replaced by professional nurses. The volunteer infirmier who came forward at the outbreak of the war, there was a great shortage of trained women, was pressed into service after a fashion.

They were, in fact, doing a noble, tiring day and night and spending her money freely on the wounded, and they were paid no expenses. She asserts that the new regulations are inspired by political motives, as it is feared that the volunteer nurses are too much attached to their aristocratic nurses and were in danger of forgetting the maxims of equality and liberty in their exaggerated respect for titled attendants.

Unpaid volunteers prefer the professional nurse, who can be ordered about in a way her volunteer sister cannot. They say that the unpaid assistant has her own ideas of discipline. The lady nurse, too, is apt to be a bit of a tyrant. I saw one to go in for a luxurious car the other day much over-dressed. A lady friend said: "Look at those stiletts; one can't see her feet. How can she move backwards and forwards in the wards all day in this?"

They are not to be outdone. The doctors of the local hospitals have sometimes been obliged to suggest that the volunteers should go home and discard their diamonds and dress more discreetly. One insisted on a diamond necklace and a less delectable gown, as "he wouldn't have half clad women hanging over the beds of his patients."

Public sentiment supports the doctors in their efforts to replace volunteer nurses by professional nurses. The volunteers are acting in the true interests of the sick and wounded.

Advance in Price of Cotton

The high prices ruling for woolsens, and the difficulty in obtaining these goods, has had the result of sending up the price of cotton. This is the cause large quantities of cotton in being used to mix with woolen stuff.

It is reported that the price of cotton has advanced about eighty per cent. above the average pre-war price. Another reason for these higher prices lies in the increased cost of manufacturing.

Not only has the price of machinery gone up, but wages have increased, and some labor is hard to obtain. In addition we must reckon the amount of cotton used for munition purposes in the form of gun cotton. The hotter weather has resulted in a higher demand for cotton in hats, for hats, for muslins and other light wear. The dry goods trade reports orders coming in very fast.

Britain Will Not Be Starved

Food Controller Expresses Confidence That Allies Will Be Able to Defeat Germany's Most Treasured Plan

In this war, and especially at this stage, food power is a co-geant with military power, said Lord Rotherham, the new food controller in an interview.

The problem of Great Britain, he said, primarily depends upon the supply and in the main the solution of the problem of supply lies in America. I am sure, he said, that the system of distribution and the most equitable regulation of prices would be sufficient to keep up the allied food supply.

It is, I think, a very vital degree upon the United States and Canada. No one recognizes that more fully than I do. Before Mr. Hoover left for America I had an opportunity of discussing with him the lessons he had drawn from his wonderful work in Belgium, and his plans as to the allied food supply.

In accepting this office one of its first duties is to study the situation. President Wilson had asked a man of Mr. Hoover's experience, and understanding of the allies to tackle in America those problems which have an intimate bearing day by day upon the food situation in this country. I have perfect confidence in the American people will respond to the calls now being made to them.

I hope I shall not be 'misconstrued' or thought impatient if I say that the sooner your food administration is established the sooner we shall breathe more easily. The practical details of our buying are complex, but the uncertainty regarding the future.

My experience in America before and since the war have given me an unusual opportunity of judging the vastness of the task which is laid upon us to their full capacity. I am confident that the German home of starvation the allies or of causing any serious shortage of food or high prices is doomed to failure.

We are doing what we can for our own part by increasing production and decreasing consumption, but in the main the solution of the primary problem of supply is in the hands of our American allies and Canada. I am sure they will not let us down.

Boy Scout Notes

Boy Scouts Secretary Has Been Killed in Action

The Boy Scouts movement in Canada has lost one of its most valued officers in the passing of Lieut. Reginald G. Smith, organizing secretary of the Canadian central council of the Boy Scouts association, whose death at the front is reported by the military authorities.

Word of his having been wounded and missing was contained in the issue of the 14th of May, but the definite announcement of his death soon followed, without any particulars having been known for several times. He was slightly wounded in one hand shortly after his battalion reached the front last fall. Still later in the fall he was more seriously wounded in the arm and leg and was under treatment for several weeks in one of the British hospitals in England.

Lieut. Smith left Canada with an Ottawa battalion, but on returning England he was transferred to a British Columbia unit. He received his commission in the 43rd Regiment, Ottawa, in November, 1915, and is the eleventh officer of that unit to lay down his life in the present war.

In the spring of 1914, Mr. Smith was appointed organizing secretary of the Canadian General Council of the Boy Scouts association, and was Sir Percy Sherwood, the Dominion commissioner, and Mr. Gerald H. Brown, the Dominion secretary and secretary of the Boy Scouts association, bear testimony to the very useful of his help.

His death will also be a great loss to the leaders in this movement from coast to coast, as well as by the very number of the boys in troops which he had visited.

"Why is it that you can so easily pick out a Scout?" asked a Boy Scout Padre on service at a casualty clearing station in France, writing to the boys in the Dominion. "On going into a ward," he says, "I often stop by a bed and asked are you a Scout?" "Yes," he would reply, and it saved a lot of worry because we knew at once that we were pals."

"It has been a common thing to find three or four masters in a ward at one time. I found an old Scout among the orderlies, and he proved to be a helpful person. When we especially pressed with work this Scout used to do a lot of writing for me. He was a very good man. I heard pa say when we got out we'd have a spanking breeze."—Baltimore American.

The news that Canada and the United States are meeting a very urgent demand by building a fleet of wooden ships has aroused much interest in Australia. "Why, it is asked, cannot ships be built in Australia, as well as in America? Small wooden ships are regularly launched here, why not extend the industry to larger, ocean-going vessels?"

It appears that the same conditions which produce the demand for wooden ships have made it difficult for Australia to take advantage of the trouble lies in the high freight prevailing. Australia produces little, if any timber suitable for shipbuilding. Pine wood must be used, and in the past shipbuilders have employed Oregon pine from America and cedar from New Zealand. But since the outbreak of war, the freight on Oregon pine has risen from 5 shillings to 25 shillings per 100 feet, and the price from 8 shillings to 35 shillings per 100 feet, and therefore these rates are prohibitive. The Australian builder would be quite willing to use kauri, which, though more costly than usual, is not so prohibitive. But kauri, which for some reason that is not very clear, kauri cannot at present be obtained in large quantities. Everything like the required quantities. One shipyard has suggested that New Zealand is liberally holding the wood, though he could offer no reason for the Dominion adopting such a course.

So the Australians are embarrassed even in doing their usual insignificant shipbuilding, and they cannot contemplate any extension of the industry. There is an abundance of hard woods, for the superstructure and other parts of the ship, but the timber that might prove a substitute for pine is the Australian cedar and cedar it appears grows in a few places that it is not yet proved a payable proposition.

Mr. H. Wright has asked, and apparently with reason, why the shipbuilding industry should not be established in the southern part of New Zealand. He points out that by the abundance of kauri and other timbers, and the fact that in Auckland enterprising builders should be able to compete with the Americans. The demand for ships is expected to persist more than five years, but smaller wooden ships will be required for a considerable time after that.

New Zealand Tightens Law

Police May Accost Eligible Aliens

Three important announcements have been made in connection with the provision of men for overseas services, under the New Zealand Military Service Act to enable the Dominion to maintain the fighting strength of her divisions at the front.

One of the changes in the system of classification of married men. Hitherto the considerations were age and the number of children. Now the law has decided that married men without family shall be called up first, men with one child next and so on proportionately.

No further opportunity for voluntary enlistment is to be afforded to those who are to be called up as their turns come.

Another announcement is to the effect that the Dominion is to be constructed to enforce that section of the Military Service Act which aims at securing the price of a ship of the cost of the expeditious force of reserves.

Constables are empowered to accost citizens on the street or in any other public place and make inquiries accordingly. Eligible persons found on the street are to be called up to the police station for a three months' imprisonment, at the discretion of the magistrate before whom he is held.

Silk Cheaper Than Cotton

A United States buyer has made a suggestion that silk might soon replace cotton if the price of the latter continues its sensational advance. The buyer pointed out that, inasmuch as raw cotton was selling at more than double the price current this time last year, the cotton wearing apparel would go up in price accordingly, and perhaps a little more in view of the fact that cotton is a more expensive of manufacturing. Under the circumstances he thought that a moderate price for silk would be a small relatively that the usual buyers of cotton would be glad to accept of it. The event the wearing of silk shirts would no longer be an indication of prosperity.

A golf enthusiast was describing to a friend the various tricks he had learned. Finally he wound up by saying:

"You know, I'd rather play golf than anything else."

"But whatever does your wife say to that?" inquired the friend.

"She says," he replied, "she's rather relieved, because she'd rather play bridge than golf."

"Belle—'I have so many callers that I can't satisfy them all.'"

"Nell—'I didn't know you had become a telephone operator.'"

What do you think of this for loyalty. There is no string to this kind. I just heard it the other day. A little French Baptist church in Montreal (think of it, in Montreal) has 144 members all told—men and women. Thirty-three of these Baptist French Canadian men are in kakkhi. Nearly one quarter of the whole membership. They did not say the Government did not treat the French Canadian rightly. They did not wait and ask for a French Canadian recruiting officer. What is the cause of this? Kindly draw your own conclusion.
